WASHBURNE WINS.

CHICAGO REPUBLICANS' SUCCESS BY OFFICIAL COUNT.

Washburne's Majority Over Cregier Is 369 A Few Districts Remain Subject to Revision, But the Result Will Not Probably be Changed.

CHICAGO, April 17.—The complete official canvass of the mayoralty election, just completed, gives Washburne (Rep.) a plurality over Cregier (Dem.) of 329. Some districts remain subject to revision. The canvassing board adjourned until Monday for the purpose of taking up the large number of returns which have been laid over for revision, and at that time Judge Prendergast will present proof of alleged Republican frauds. If these proofs are of such a nature as to invalidate the election of any of them the board may set others aside. The certificate of election will go to Hempstead Washburne. If the certificate of election is issued, the only redress Mayor Cregier has is to go into the courts, but it is not likely that he will go into protracted and expensive litigation.

The vote for mayor is as follows: Hempstead Washburne, Rep., 46,957; DeWitt C. Cregier, Dem., 46,588; Carter H. Harrison, Ind., 42,931; E. Washburn, Cit. Rep., 24,027; Thos. Morgan, Socialist, 2,376. H. Washburne's plurality, 329.

The vote in the rest of the city ticket is as follows: For treasurer—Peter Kiolbassa, Dem., 50,056; Jacob Tieddmann, Rep., 45,... Kiolbassa's plurality, 4417. City attorney—J. J. Kern, Dem., 50,547; B. F. Richolson, Rep., 49,308; Kern's plurality, 1239. City clerk—J. R. B. Vancleave, Rep., 50,620; James Strain, Dem., 50,964; Vancleave's plurality, 5735. The election of Kern as city attorney is a genuine surprise, it having been generally conceded from the beginning of the canvass that Richolson would have more than a thousand plurality.

Hot Shot from a Reporter.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The Star this evening publishes an open letter from George H. Harries, addressed to Dr. S. Verdi, of this city, who in a recently published statement denied that he gave utterance to language on the Italian affair which Harries in an interview credited to the doctor. Verdi is a prominent physician here, of Italian birth, and all along was a close friend of Baron Fava, the recalled minister. The most objectionable words that were used in his (the doctor's) public statement, he said "were un... and unalt...d." They read as follows: "What can we look for from such a community as New Orleans, where the mayor is a murderer, the sheriff a murderer, the board of trade and the clubs are composed of murderers, where murder has common and open profession of the heart."

Harries in his letter does not mince words and among other things says to the doctor: "Your denial is a carefully prepared document; it is a series of utterances from which there can be no retraction. For two weeks you have been circulating loose-jointed negative assertions of misrepresentation, assertions to which I paid no attention, but I have at last, finally dealt that the interview published in The Star on the 1st inst. is true, and I, in reply, declare most emphatically that the only apparent difference between Ananias and you will lie in the fact that Ananias is dead.

"Not only did you say all that was attributed to you in the interview, but you said it with such force and evident passion that the primary effect of your denunciations need not be put into type. Your manner was that of a man whose interest in the question could not easily be measured by words, and your indignation was at a fever heat when you recited the sentences which you now partially disclaim responsibility for. When you charged New Orleans with being a city of murderers, you did so with a vehemence that compelled belief in your honesty of conviction. When you first attempted denial it was craftily done and was done when you saw how impolitic you had been. The first alleged denial did not deny, and had you rested there, this letter would never have been written, but emboldened by the silence of those whose reputations were attacked, you proceeded to greater lengths, and have at last reached the end of your rope—the noose end. For thirty years you have received your sustenance mainly from the American people, and as soon as the popularity of your views was abroad it was plain to your Machiavellian intellect that some body had to talk too much. You strongly suspected yourself of being that unfortunate individual—I shall not discuss with you the code of ethics which broadly governs the newspaper profession—you are but slightly acquainted with the newspaper reporter—for whatever other weakness he may have he never wastes his time in the cultivation of useless plants, and he would necessarily be at an argumentative disadvantage, but I do intend to place myself on record as to the conversation we had on the afternoon of April 1. Your denial—in warp, woof, fibre and finish is a plain, unadorned and not the semi-excusable falsehood of a brave man who denies to shield somebody else, but the lie of a coward of one whose sentiments are stronger than their creator. The interview you now complain of is a literal and absolute fact, and you know it to be so, but American condemnation speedily convinced you that you had made the error of your life and in your wild rush for shelter you abjured manly principles, wrapped yourself in slavish fear as in a garment and cringingly testified to that nebulous something which might in a police court be termed a previous character.

Senator Wolcott Interviewed.

DENVER, April 17.—Senator Wolcott arrived in the city to-day, and will remain until November. In an interview with The Times this afternoon he said, in reply to the question, "Some have had an idea that the recent Democratic victories in Denver, Pueblo and elsewhere indicated a change in the state, what is your opinion of that?"

"I don't think that is true, no, not at all. The recent Democratic victory here was a local thing. It was a clear case of the revolt of the people against boodle aldermen, a triumph of the better elements that I am in entire sympathy with and approve of thoroughly. There should be no question of politics in municipal affairs. Yet there were good men on the Republican local ticket, several of them, but they were swamped by the company they were in."

Upon that the senator took the irrigation question. "Is the importance of the matter fully understood in the east?"

"Yes, yes, indeed, to an extent never approached before. Although nothing of any particular importance was accomplished during the last session, the matter was agitated very considerably and is coming up for an early solution. They are asking $100,000,000 for the Nicaragua canal; for my part, I am of the opinion that it would be much better expended in irrigation for the west and then are but a few who think with me, but the ... will eventually be disposed of favorably, and things ... years will be ... though at the ... this ... session. There can be little doubt of that.

As for free silver, "Well we are going to get it, that is sure, and that is all that can be said. Of course with an administration against us it will be up hill work for a time. We have a majority in the lower house with us now, and a majority in the senate. We have proved that several times," the senator said with pardonable pride "and some day we will get it."

Florida Choosing a Senator.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., April 17.—In the joint Democratic senatorial nominating caucus to-night, White, ... of Hillsborough county, who ... his name was reached, arose and said that a Call man told him this morning it would be worth $700 for him to vote for Call. This produced a pronounced sensation, but an investigation showed that the offer was made to John McClellan, of Calhoun county, not a member of the legislature, and Call's supporters disclaimed all connection with him, or responsibility for his actions. Subsequently a note from Senator Call himself, also disclaimed all connection with McClellan. Six ballots were taken to-night but no great change occurred, and the last which stood Call 58; Speer 36 and Bloxham 3, differed but little from the earlier ballots. At the close of the 18th ballot, a resolution was offered by an anti-Callite, providing that no election of a United States senator shall be had until a nomination shall have been made by the two-thirds vote. The Call men did not oppose the resolution, but moved to postpone consideration of it till Monday night and the motion finally prevailed, 50 to 45. The 18th and last ballot resulted as follows: Call 57; Speer 37; Bloxham 4. The caucus then adjourned till Monday night.

Second Ballot Necessary.

BERLIN, April 17.—The latest returns from Geestemunde, where the election was held on Wednesday last for a member of the reichstag are as follows:

Prince Bismarck	7577
Semalfeld (Socialist)	4928
Platt (Guelph)	3343
Adolff (Freisinnige)	2412

A second ballot will be necessary between Prince Bismarck and Herr Semalfeld, the Socialist candidate, as a majority of the vote is necessary in order to elect a candidate to election.

The apathy of the electors as to the result of the election is the most remarkable feature of the contest. Over 40 per cent. of the electors did not appear at the polls. The nationalists at the last election polled a sufficient number of votes to swamp all rivals, but now they only muster a bare one-fourth of the electors. One reason of this apathy was that Prince Bismarck did not take any part in the contest. He did not even issue an address to the electors.

The final returns show a remote chance that Prince Bismarck may be defeated on the re-ballot. The prince, however, gives no sign of retiring from the field. The element of possible danger will, it is expected, stimulate the National Liberals to poll a heavier vote and secure Bismarck's election. The kaiser is said to be anxious.

Southern Republicans.

CHICAGO, April 17.—A special dispatch from Charleston, S. C., says: A significant political meeting was held at the state capitol yesterday. It was the first white Republican meeting ever held in the state and is said to be largely the outgrowth of the Alliance wave which swept over this state last year. The significance of the meeting was the presence for the first time of a number of leading white citizens who have heretofore been associated with the straight Democratic party. Fifty-one clubs were represented. The meeting elected delegates to the Republican League convention which meets at Cincinnati April 21. This movement is regarded with some concern here, taken as it is in consideration of the reported declaration of the Alliance in favor of a third party.

What Italians Think.

ROME, April 17.—The Messagero to-day says that Mr. Blaine's reply to the Marquis di Rudini's last note evinces the great desire of Mr. Blaine to elude the demands of the Italian government, and to escape from indemnifying the families of the men lynched at New Orleans, and to refrain from assenting to the right of the Italian government to intervene in the New Orleans affair.

The Popolo Romano, also discussing Mr. Blaine's reply, says that in view of the tenor of Mr. Blaine's answer to the Marquis di Rudini's note, it is difficult to form any idea as to how or where the matter will end.

A Kansas Cyclone.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 17.—A special from Liberal, Kan., states that report has just been received at the new court house at Hansford, Tex., in course of construction and nearly completed, was destroyed by a cyclone Wednesday afternoon. Two men were killed and one man badly injured. Every house in the little town was more or less damaged. The storm traveled northwesterly to Paludora, a little town on the Beaver river, Oklahoma, which place is reported as entirely destroyed. Both localities are many miles from railroads, and the details are unobtainable.

Evading the Law.

WASHINGTON, April 17. Collector Dow, of Portland, Me., reports to the treasury department that on April 14 the Oregon landed at that port fifteen emigrants. She had previously touched at Halifax and landed there 494 immigrants. Inquiry among the immigrants landed at Portland developed the fact that those landed at Halifax intended to move over into the United States at the first opportunity. From information obtained at Halifax, Collector Dow says that they are a low and degraded class of immigrants.

Indians Uneasy.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The Indian office to-day received a long letter from Capt. Chas. G. Penney, acting Indian agent at the Pine Ridge agency, in which he gives his views regarding the condition of the Indians at Pine Ridge. He says that there is a general feeling of unrest among the Indians, due to bad faith on the part of the government, and the almost total failure of their crops. So far as legislation goes, the other causes of trouble have been made right, but as the Indian sees it, it is only another promise which seems to inspire hope among them.

No Answer from Diaz.

EL PASO, TEX., April 17.—Up to this hour 3 o'clock no reply has been received to the invitation of the mayor of El Paso to President Diaz, of Mexico, relative to his meeting President Harrison here next Tuesday.

A New British General.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 17.—The promotion of Lieut. Sir John Ross, commander of English forces in North America, is announced. He has been made a general, succeeding Gen. R. W. White, who has been placed on the retired list.

AS WAS EXPECTED.

THE KANSAS CITY COMMERCIAL CONGRESS BREAKS UP.

The Majority Committee's Report is Driven Through Some Delegations, Refuse to Vote, Others Withdraw. Free Silver and Free Trade Prevail.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 17.—The Commercial Congress was called for 9 o'clock, but owing to the late hour of the adjournment of the reception last night, the delegates were slow to assemble and it was after 10 o'clock when the convention was called to order. After prayer by the Rev. Dr. Wasser, the unfinished programme for yesterday was taken up, the subject being "Transportation and Improvement of Water Ways, Levees, Gulf and Pacific Ports."

Mr. S. A. Thompson, secretary of the Commercial Club of Duluth, advocated the improvement of water way as affording the cheapest transportation.

Gen. T. C. Catching of Mississippi, argued that an increase in water traffic, however great, would not decrease railroad business, but would rather increase it.

Hon. J. A. Murphy of Iowa, spoke on the Hennepin canal. His life had one purpose, and his heart one hope, and that was the construction of the Hennepin canal. He explained in a long speech the benefits to accrue from the construction of the canal, and had no doubt that the government would construct it if the government could be brought to a realizing sense of the canal's importance.

Col. A. C. Fisk, of Denver, delivered an address upon irrigation to the congress today. He said 300,000,000 of people were kept alive on food raised off irrigated land in Spain, China, Egypt, Russia, India and the United States, yet the subject of irrigation was very little understood, although carried on successfully for hundreds of years. In the trans-Missouri country enough land was allowed to go waste that was susceptible of cultivation to support whole nations of people. The work of irrigation had already been begun by the United States. Major Powell estimated that there were 1,000,000 square miles of arid lands in the western country that could be made productive by irrigation. At the minimum price of public lands, $1.25 per acre, this land had a value of $800,000,000; at $20 per acre, the moderate estimation of its value when irrigated, it would be worth $19,200,000,000. A large proportion of this land was public domain and never would be settled without irrigation.

The government had done but very little for the great west. Upon other public improvements the government had expended more than $500,000,000. It had expended nothing for irrigation. In states already settled that possessed arid lands the irrigation should be established by the state government, and should encourage water and land companies with the rates fixed by the state. No other fertilizer than water was necessary for irrigated lands. Water was a fertilizer itself, and on the irrigated lands of the Old World crops had been raised without fertilization and without rotation of crops for over two thousand successive years. Cultivation ceased rainfall, and when the arid lands were made susceptible of cultivation by irrigation, then its supply of water would gradually come from the clouds instead from the ditches and the country would be reclaimed forever.

The efficiency and effectiveness of irrigation were explained by the speaker and he showed how many thousands of acres of land in Colorado had been successfully cultivated by means of irrigation.

The argument on the adoption of the report of the committee on resolutions was very bitter and continued. At 5.30 the convention adjourned for twenty-five minutes to reassemble at another hall on account of a theatrical troupe needing the hall. At 6.05 they met again and the discussion was resumed, getting hotter and hotter every minute, until at 8.30 the majority report was accepted as a whole without amendment and the announcement was received with vociferous cheers from the majority.

As soon as quiet was restored the Minnesota delegation rose to its feet as one and Mr. E. V. Smalley, speaking for his brother members, said that Minnesota wished to emphasize the objection to making the so-called non-partisan congress a bitter partisan convention, and in order to do this so that there would be no mistake as to their attitude the delegates filed out of the hall amid the cheers, howling and catcalls of those who remained. The free silver and free trade resolutions were the ones which were the cause of trouble and while Minnesota made their protest emphatic, many delegates from the Republican states left the hall during the debate and refused to take part in the proceedings when they saw how the matter would end. This fact is shown in the vote by states, which was taken on the motion of adoption of the report. The vote in detail was as follows:

STATE	No	Aye
Washington	3	0
Wisconsin*
South Dakota*
Louisiana	1	2
Alabama	0	1
Colorado	1	5
California*
Arkansas	0	5
Utah*
Texas	1	10
Oklahoma	1	5
Nebraska	0	5
Missouri	7	20
Mississippi	0	5
Minnesota	8	1
Michigan*
Kentucky*
Kansas	20	5
Iowa	1	6
Indiana	0	3
Illinois	2	4
Ohio	3	6
Tennessee*
Indian Territory	1	9
New Mexico	1	6
Total	33	78

* Did not vote.

After the Minnesota delegation left the hall there was a regular stampede and in five minutes there were barely enough delegates left to adjourn decently. A cross-fire of talk was indulged in until 9.15, when they could adjourn sine die. The delegates remaining in the city were entertained in a banquet by the citizens to-night.

Weekly Review of Trade.

NEW YORK, April 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade will say: With better weather, there is a visible improvement in trade, and while it is but slight yet, the outlook for the future is generally regarded as encouraging.

Meanwhile the volume of trade is nearly as large in aggregate value as it was a year ago, some decrease in quantities of import products being balanced by an advance in the level of prices, which was nearly 15 per cent. higher than a year ago April 1st, and is still more than 13 per cent. higher.

The iron trade shows greater shrinkage than any other, the decrease in charcoal iron production in March having been 1808 tons, and in all iron, with corrections in coke output, 97,983 tons. The output is 68,311 tons, or 86.6 per cent. lower than a year ago.

There is seen a somewhat better demand for finished products, and especially for structural iron and rails, and 40,000 tons of rails have been sold during the week, and outorders for the year thus far about 55,000 tons. The anthracite coal trade still drags, the reported output, 7,002,671 tons, being 1,...,162 tons greater than last year to same date. Consumption of copper is slow, and the tin is a quarter weaker with lead dull. The spinners' takings of cotton continue slightly greater than a year ago, with the exports very much larger.

Wool is dull, Boston being but 2,280,100 pounds for the week.

At Boston the demand for merchandise, generally has improved and retail trade has been quite heavy. Trade at Philadelphia is only fair. Some kinds of finished iron at Pittsburg are weaker, but glass unchanged. At Cleveland trade is generally inactive; some improvement is seen at Cincinnati, and also at Detroit. The sales of drygoods at Chicago fall a trifle below those of last year, and clothing is quiet but shoes active and collections in all those trades good. Receipts of lard and butter show slight decrease, and of dressed beef and cheese settled increase with considerable gain in wool.

At Omaha, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Denver trade is fairly good, prices of lumber and flour improving. Business is dull at Kansas City and Memphis, but improving at New Orleans and Atlanta. In speculative markets there has been a general advance in breadstuffs, hogs and lard, a decline in oil and no change in cotton and coffee. Larger export demands, and reports of scarcity abroad, have lifted wheat 2¼ cents, to $1.19¾, with sales of 45,000,000 bushels here, and oats have risen 2 cents, to $0.61¼, and corn 5¼ cents, to $0.82¼ on small sales.

The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number for the United States, 217, and for Canada, 34; or a total of 251, as compared with a total of 213 last week and 243 the week previous to the last. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 214, representing 181 failures in the United States and 33 in the Dominion of Canada.

The Millington Trial.

DENVER, April 17.—The evidence introduced in the Millington trial to-day, was for the purpose of breaking down the testimony of Mrs. Millington. City Marshal Ogden of Ft. Collins, who testified yesterday, was again called to the stand. This time he testified that he knew no such persons in Ft. Collins as Mrs. Millington, claims were her pals.

C. R. Welch, of the famous Welch block in Ft. Collins, was on the stand. He said he never had an account against Mrs. Avery, with one exception, and that she had unlimited credit at his store.

"You were a member of the coroner's jury that returned a verdict making these defendants responsible for William Avery's death?"

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Welch decisively.

"You were also a member of the grand jury, were you not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Any design in this, Mr. Welch, do you think?" said Mr. Patterson.

"No, sir."

"You had a good many conversations about this time behind your store with Mr. Garrigues, didn't you?"

"Yes; I believe I did."

"You and he were devising means at that time to induce a majority of the grand jury to bring in an indictment against these defendants?"

"No, sir; I deny every word of it," said Mr. Welch, indignantly.

"One of your clerks was a member of the grand jury, too, wasn't he?"

"Yes, sir; a Mr. Heath."

"Do you know, Mr. Welch, how this happened that both you and one of your clerks were on the grand jury?" said Mr. Patterson in his soft, sarcastic way.

"No sir, I do not know," said Mr. Welch.

Sanford Danach, a lawyer in Ft. Collins, testified that when John C. Davis told the story about Trob... Davis' ... to Pearl Avery, he did not locate the drug store in the right place.

"To whom did you tell this conversation as soon as you heard it?" asked Mr. Patterson.

"I didn't tell any one."

"Well, when Mr. John C. Davis told this incident, he made the remark that Charles Davis had either not told the truth or was badly mistaken, didn't he?"

"Well, I believe he did say something like that."

Judge J. A. Baughton, of Ft. Collins, an attorney and county judge, was next called. He said Mr. Avery was a man of good health and always had been.

C. C. Emigh, who had known Mr. Avery all his life, said he was in robust health.

A Blockade Modified.

PARIS, April 17.—Advices from Chili say that in consequence of the instruction which Lord Salisbury cabled on Tuesday last to the British minister in Chili and to the admiral in command of the British fleet in Chilian waters, notifying those officials that the closing of the nitrate ports by President Balmaceda was "ultra vires" in some ports where the blockade had been declared and notifying the English ship owners that the British admiral would protect their interest and that England does not recognize the double exaction of duties by President Balmaceda and by the Congressional party, and also in consequence of protests made by consuls of the various European powers in Chili,—President Balmaceda has ordered the Chilian port officials to avoid any complications with the owners and officials of foreign vessels.

English Women's Rights.

LONDON, April 18.—In the house of the lords yesterday, the lord high chancellor of England, Lord Salisbury, referring to the Clitheroe ... which a man named Jackson, was by the court of appeals, found to have no right to compel his own wife to live with him, stated that the government would not introduce a bill giving men power to imprison their wives for refusing to comply with a magistrate's order, restoring the man to his conjugal rights. Parliament had abolished the power to imprison a wife for refusing to live with her husband and the judge could not alter the case.

A Disastrous Fire.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Last night's fire in ancient Greenwich village here proved to be a most disastrous one. It was daylight before the fire was gotten under control. At the time the Ross building, corner of Hudson and Bank streets, running through to Greenwich, had been totally destroyed. Taggart's storage warehouse was also in ruins. Three dwelling houses on Bank street and several tenements on Greenwich street were damaged. It is estimated that the loss will amount to half a million.

An insurance man says that at a reasonable estimate the loss was about $600,000. Taggart's loss will probably reach $100,000, partly covered by insurance. Wood and Hughes are the heaviest losers. It is said their loss will probably be $100,000. The cause of the fire is not yet ascertained.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—For Colorado: Rains; northerly winds; lower temperature.

ACROSS THE RIVER.

PRESIDENT HARRISON VISITS MEMPHIS AND LITTLE ROCK.

No Animosity Towards Ex-Confederates. The Yoke of Obedience to Law Rests Upon All. Pueblo Extends a Cordial Invitation.

MEMPHIS, TENN., April 17.—The elegant special train bearing the presidential party arrived here this morning at 9 o'clock, promptly on schedule time. The party were immediately assigned to the carriages which awaited them and driven up Main street to the Merchants exchange, fronting on Court square, which was massed with people. The president was escorted up the iron steps and introduced to the assembled crowd by Mayor Clapp, who welcomed the president on behalf of the city. In concluding his speech, the president said:

"The welcome of ... speech to the ... throng is too great for me. I beg to assure you that I carry from the great war no sentiment of ill-will to any. [Cheers.] I am glad that the Confederate soldier, confessing that defeat which has brought him blessings that would have been impossible otherwise, has been taken again into full participation in the administration of the government, that no penalties, limitations or other inflictions rest upon you. I have taken and can always take the hand of a brave Confederate soldier with confidence and respect. [Great cheering.]

"I would put you under one yoke only, and that is the yoke the victors in that struggle bore when they went home and laid off their uniforms, their yoke of the law and the obligation always to obey it. [Cheers.]

"Upon that platform, without distinction between the victors and vanquished, we enter together upon the possibilities as a people that we cannot over-estimate. I believe this nation is lifting itself to a new life, that this flag shall float on unfamiliar seas and that this coming prosperity will be equally shared by all our people. [Prolonged cheers.]

When the cheering had subsided, long calls were made for Postmaster General Wanamaker. He responded, and in a few well chosen remarks referred in a pleasing manner to the prosperity of the south as evinced by the constantly increasing number of new postoffices being established.

He was followed by Secretary Rusk, after which the public reception was begun, the president standing in the doorway. The public reception was concluded about 11:30, and the party again resumed their carriages and were escorted to the Louisville and Nashville depot, the trains in the meantime having been transferred. There another informal reception was held by the presidential party, a large crowd, passing through the train. A number of beautiful floral offerings from private citizens were placed aboard the train here. Governor Eagle and a committee of citizens, who arrived this morning, met the party at the depot, and will act as escort to Little Rock.

At 11:55 the train passed slowly down the incline to the immense ferry boat of the Little Rock and Memphis, and at noon amid a tremendous din the train moved slowly away from the shore, and the presidential party was well on its way to the Arkansas capital.

Little Rock's Reception.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 17.—The presidential train arrived in Little Rock at 5.45 o'clock this evening after an uneventful run from Memphis. The great Arkansas swamp region through which the train passed was rather monotonous but the president seemed to enjoy the luxuriant foliage and picturesque cabins. At Madison, a small village on the St. Francis river, the train was brought to a standstill to enable the president to hear a serenade by a band of negro musicians. At Forest City a large crowd cheered the president as the train went by and at Brinkley, a salute was fired from a cannon and several hundred people gave vent to their lungs. Carlisle, a village thirty miles from Little Rock, turned out a hundred people to greet the president. Here the wife of Governor Eagle and a number of other ladies, forming a committee of reception, met the train and proceeded with it to Little Rock. The president's reception at Little Rock was enthusiastic, cannon booming and steam whistles blowing. Escorted by military organizations the presidential party proceeded to the state capitol, in front of which a gayly decorated grand stand had been erected. The presidential party were given seats on the platform, with the governor and state officers, federal and state judiciary, reception committees and mayor and town council. In front of the grand stand several thousand people were packed in a solid mass and they cheered lustily when the president was introduced by Governor Eagle. The president made a short speech and Postmaster General Wanamaker and Secretary Rusk followed with brief remarks. After the president had held a short reception he was driven back to the depot and just before 7 o'clock, the presidential train left for Galveston. The houses along the line of route in Little Rock were profusely decorated with bunting and the capitol building was covered with flags.

Governor Hogg, of Texas, has telegraphed he will meet the president at Palestine, in that state, and Brigadier General Stanley, commanding the department of Texas, and his personal staff will join the party at Galveston and accompany it to San Antonio. Brigadier General McCook will accompany the party through his department from El Paso to Los Angeles. The president to-day informed the committee in charge of the arrangements at Galveston that he preferred that there be no demonstration in that city on Sunday next, as it is his desire to devote the whole day to a much needed rest. The review of school children arranged for that day will therefore be abandoned.

Pueblo's Invitation.

PUEBLO, April 17.—The following telegram was sent to President Harrison to-day:

To the President, presidential train, Little Rock, Ark.:

Pueblo, the second city in the centennial state, the largest bullion producing city in the republic, the seat of the great mineral palace, the grandest display of the precious metals and minerals on earth and the best representative of that American genius which has transformed the great American desert into the Mecca for wealth seekers and home seekers would feel highly honored if his excellency would reconsider his determination and become our guest for a few hours. In that time, he could witness the transformation of crude ore into gold and silver bullion by some of the greatest smelters on earth, the iron of the mountains converted into steel rails and an object lesson as to how our civilization has made possible the grandest dreams of the sires of our republic. We have the finest opera house, save one, in the country, the eighth in rank of American National banks, and the largest steel and iron works west of Pennsylvania. Colorado Springs is only ninety minutes distant by rail, and can be reached at a reasonable hour. The present mayor, mayor elect, the board of trade, and the Commercial and Manufacturers' club, on behalf of every man, woman and child of the city, unite in asking the honored chief magistrate of our common country to be our guest for a few hours, and taste of western mountain hospitality.

Parnell's Manifesto.

LONDON, April 17.—Parnell has issued a manifesto to the members of the English National League. He says that his policy has been to make English parties subserve Irish interests. This was a success in the land arrears and home rule bills, when we had the support of both the English parties. We are weak because of the desertion of raw recruits and terrified captains. It is sought to make our organization subserve English interests. This would be utterly ruinous. Mr. Parnell dwells briefly upon the plan of the seceders, under the spell of English dictation, to drive him from public life, and he turns from the Anglo-Irish, and appeals to the national instincts of the Irish race, to show that Irishmen alone shall regulate Irish affairs from selecting a leader in the English parliament. Mr. Parnell asserts that he will soon appoint a provisional executive of faithful Irishmen, and he asks his fellow-countrymen in England to rally in the interest of a free and independent Irish parliament. Parnell's manifesto is addressed to members of the National League of Great Britain.

Base Ball.

DENVER, April 17.—It took ten innings to decide to-day's game, Sioux City winning on a muff by Werrick. Denver could do nothing with Seibel until the seventh inning, when they knocked him out of the box. Dewall succeeded him and pitched good ball. Both nines indulged in considerable wrangling. Attendance 1200. Score:

Denver	0	0	0	0	0	0	5	0	0	0—5
Sioux City	3	0	1	0	0	0	1	0	0	1—6

ST. LOUIS, April 17. The Browns defeated Columbus in a well-played game this afternoon. The work of both pitchers were perfect and Hay in centre and at bat for the home team played a great game.

SCORE:

St. Louis	0	0	0	3	0	3	0	1	—7
Columbus	0	0	1	0	0	3	0	0	0—4

The Prosperous South.

NEW YORK, April 17. John H. Inman, president of the Richmond Terminal system, returned to-day from an extensive trip through the south. The south, Mr. Inman, said was in a prosperous condition, and as an illustration of this, said that the net earnings of the Terminal were $100,000 more a month this year than last. The preparations made by the planters would indicate a larger crop of cotton this year than last.

Mr. Inman denied that the Terminal system would lose a lot of its securities. He thought the leasing of the Georgia Central would be accomplished within ten days. The idea contemplated as to the lease of the road to the Georgia Pacific, the Richmond and Danville guarantees the lease, thus practically leasing the Central themselves. In regard to the sale of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company's property, Mr. Inman said, that the English syndicate proposal was to purchase for $2,000,000 the Tennessee division of the company's property. This proposition would be submitted to a special meeting of the stockholders which will be held at Tracy City, Tenn., on May 7. He could not tell whether the offer of the syndicate would be accepted or not.

The Result of a Joke.

CINCINNATI, April 17.—Manager Hill is badly broken up over the serious result of his scuffle with Allen O. Myers. The latter was able to be up to-day, but the doctors pronounce his injury permanent and may be dangerous. Mr. Myers said to-day: "The doctor said that in bending me back Hill had torn my larynx and injured the bronchial tubes in the lower part of the lungs. He said that I had also broken a small blood vessel in the neck. I have had five serious hemorrhages."

A Railway War.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The war between the railroads of the Trunk Line association and the Chicago and Alton has caused a great deal of delay and confusion among the immigrants who arrive here and wish to go west. Colonel Weber, the commissioner of emigration, to-day notified all the roads concerned that no immigrant must be delayed hereafter by the trouble between the roads. The roads whose line the ticket of the emigrant takes him, must carry him straight through to his destination.

Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, April 17.—Wheat was very strong and advanced sharply on a sudden upturn in prices on the Pacific coast and strong cable advices. May closed 3⅞ cents higher and July gained 2¼ cents; receipts, sixty one cars.

Corn advanced ¼@1¼ cents on high cables and in sympathy with the fever in wheat, but declined sharply near the close on realizing sales and closed ¼@⅜ cents lower; receipts, 333 cars.

Oats opened strong, advanced ¾@1¼ cents, closing ¼@¾ cents higher. The bulge was caused by free buying by St. Louis and local shorts. Receipts 116 cars.

Provisions were weak on free selling by some of the big packers.—Pork declined 2½@5 cents and lard 2½ cents. Ribs were relatively firmer than pork or lard, closing with a gain of 5@7½ cents.

Closing prices: Wheat—May 1.11. July 1.09, Sept. —.
Corn May 72¾, July 68¾, Sept. —.

The Kansas cyclone begins its harvest early this year.

Why did the Arapahoe grand jury indict men who denied their guilt and pay no attention to those who admitted that they were accessories to crime?

The courteous and enthusiastic reception of President Harrison at the south is creditable to that section and ought in itself to prove the absurdity of some of the stories printed about that region.

The different uses of the same word in the English language are sometimes confusing to foreigners, but Premier di Rudini will learn in time the difference between Secretary Blaine's foreign policy and a life and accident insurance policy.

Dr. Vardi, of Washington, the Italian-American friend of ex-Dictator Fava, is not the first man who has thought it expedient to contradict an interview as published. Nor is he the first man to find out that a reporter has a reputation and honor of his own. Dr. Verdi has [illegible] what he deserves.

A prominent feature of to-morrow's Gazette will be a story in two chapters by "The Duchess." The story is complete in this number and is written in the peculiar style which has made this author so [illegible]. Readers who do not find Stevenson to their taste will probably enjoy this article, which is of an entirely different style.

The [illegible] congress at Kansas City [illegible] anticipated in our [illegible] dispatches failed to accomplish any [illegible] good and broke up in disorder. The action was due to the ill advised action of a majority of the convention in endorsing free silver and free [illegible]. In attempting too much they have failed of securing the good which [illegible] within their grasp. [illegible] most [illegible] to [illegible] and were the [illegible] which were addressed to that body. President Harrison's letter on silver [illegible], Charles Francis Adams' [illegible] manufacturers. Commissioner [illegible] on the possibilities [illegible], Mr. [illegible]'s paper on [illegible], it is seldom that a con[illegible] favored with so many [illegible] of real value and interest. [illegible] benefit has undoubtedly [illegible] the [illegible] of the delegates [illegible] so many states and the recognition [illegible] into [illegible]. It is to be hoped that the convention soon to be held in Denver will profit by the mistakes at [illegible] City, that it will limit itself to the discussion of commercial [illegible] questions, let politics and especially the Farmers' Alliance alone, [illegible] successful as the Kansas City [illegible] might have been.

[illegible] have followed with interest the proceedings of the Convention [illegible] City will be as [illegible] in the article by T. W. [illegible] the Antidote for Sectionalism which will appear [illegible] of [illegible] to Young Citizens" [illegible] in [illegible] Gazette. The [illegible] influence which tend toward [illegible] in our nation is always [illegible], and never more so than at the present time. From the earliest history of this country lines were laid down upon which sectionalism was developed, and the differences of the Puritans and Cavaliers when fully developed tended inevitably to the civil war. This conflict destroyed the old landmarks, and it seems now a serious question whether these shall be replaced by new ones, or whether the country will be able to go forward to united effort. The question, too, of further extension of the national territory is of increasing importance. It would be a matter of pride, and perhaps of advantage, to extend the territorial limits, but it would certainly not be advisable if the nation's area is already so large that the tendency to disruption is a serious danger.

Co-ordinate Government.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 11, 1891.
To the Editor of the Gazette:

In Senator Edmunds' letter to Vice President Morton notifying him of his resignation as senator, he characterizes the senate, quoting the paragraph, as "the sheet anchor of the republic." I once heard Senator Sumner say at a private dinner during the period of the controversy between President Johnson and congress that "the president would learn that the ultimate power of the government resided in the senate." I have wondered what statesmen mean by these utterances. It is commonly understood that the three departments provided by the constitution, the legislative, judicial and executive, are co-ordinate, equal, independent, in a nicely adjusted system of checks and balances, no one of paramount power over others. It is a question for your college students. Perhaps as notable an instance illustrating the "sheet anchor" and "ultimate power" idea as any was one hardly anticipated by Senator Sumner, the impeachment trial of President Johnson "for high crimes and misdemeanors," in which his conviction was defeated by the senate.

An Unfounded Rumor

NEW YORK, April 17.—A London dispatch says that a letter from Mrs. George Edwardes to her husband, the manager of the Gaiety theater is responsible for the statement that Mrs. Antonio Navarro, nee Anderson, had become a mother. As the sex of the child was not mentioned, a reporter went to Bournemouth to find out that important detail. On his arrival he found that the whole story was untrue.

RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Notes and Comments by the Rev. [illegible]

An important step toward extending the influence of Harvard university has been taken in Cambridge in the organization known as the Prospect Union, which takes its name from the Prospect house in Cambridgeport where its headquarters now are. The scheme originated in the mind of Rev. R. E. Ely of the new Hope Congregational church, who is also a student in the graduate department of the university. He had become interested in the work in London, as carried on at Toynbee hall and Oxford house, and in New York at the Rivington street college settlement. A beginning was made in Cambridge last February, and from a few at the start the numbers have increased to 250, with forty undergraduates and others who act as instructors. Teachers and pupils are on the same level when in the rooms of the Union. Twenty-five cents entrance fee and the same sum per month are the only charges. A number of sustaining members at five dollars a year help to increase the ready capital. The rooms are open at all hours to members, and are pleasantly located and well furnished, and are well provided with current literature. Here six evenings in the week instruction is given in elementary and higher studies and lectures by experts, including some of the most eminent Harvard professors, and mutual discussions of questions of moment give variety and value to the thought and work of the Union. Social gatherings, with entertainments, music and refreshments, are also an important factor.

The movement has behind it the motive of disabusing the minds of the laboring and artisan classes of the idea that a wider education is not for them or that those who have been fortunate enough to acquire a liberal education belong to another sphere, but to prove, on the contrary, that education is something within the reach of anyone. To this end the undergraduates of the university aim, by personal contact, to lift up and bless men and women whose lives have been narrow and checked. The Union is controlled by a board of officers which includes men of university training and men of business training, and the rules of conducting classes and exercises are of the most democratic and informal character.

A good many people, points out Dr. Marvin R. Vincent in a recent [illegible], are included in the list of weak brethren who do not belong there. "They are people who, so far from being weak, have sharp conceptions and very positive convictions of duty; who insist on forcing their convictions upon the practical acceptance of others, and who claim the right of the weak brother to extort from them concessions of individual liberty, so as to make their conduct square with their own ideas. Under these circumstances the 'weak brother' writes himself down as a [illegible], a fraud, and a bully. He changes Paul's gracious concession into imperious demand. He says to his brother: 'You must [illegible] not [illegible] therefore you must not [illegible].' And he instances as [illegible] where the weak brother has arrogantly demanded that his tastes be not offended, that of a saintly, sweet woman who was reproved by a 'pillar' of the church for wearing kid gloves; that of a religious journal which within a year printed a diatribe against a minister who [illegible] boards, and the fact that he was himself decently kindly but [illegible] that he was imperiling his influence as a minister by wearing 'gold' the precious metal alluded to being a plain gold ring placed on his finger thirty-five years ago by his wife. And these examples might be multiplied. All these exactions are not urged to hold up the weak brother who [illegible], but to satisfy and also [illegible] to the [illegible] strong brother who, in the slang of the day, 'knows it all.' And to quote Dr. Vincent once more: 'It does not take long for a few trifles of this kind to aggregate themselves into a weight and religious tyranny which is as irrational as it is despotic. These things are not matters of [illegible] weak [illegible]. They have little or nothing to do with [illegible]. They are individual religious [illegible], and by certain mediums [illegible] points from which to thrust a hand into their neighbor's business, and to indulge their desire to manage. [illegible] no claims to tender dealing. They constitute a religious bullying, which may justly [illegible] intolerable."

An interesting and [illegible] to [illegible] is now in [illegible] by which the systematic and scientific study of the Bible is being extended in American colleges and [illegible]. Unquestionably the three ancient literatures which have [illegible] powerfully influenced human thought and action have been the Greek, Roman and Hebrew. The [illegible] widespread and [illegible] ably has been exerted by the Hebrew. Yet, largely owing to fears of breeding theological strife, the study of the Hebrew literature contained in the Bible has been almost wholly left out of the higher education. One of the happy results of the advent of more liberal ideas in theology has been the recognition of the possibility of studying the Bible as literature. At Howard university there are almost innumerable opportunities for special study in Biblical literature. At Yale an elective offered to seniors and juniors takes up the early Hebrew history, institutions, and legal literature. This course is given every third year, the others in the series taking up Old Testament prophetic literature and Old Testament wisdom literature. Three years ago the class taking this work numbered twenty-three, two years ago thirty-four, last year forty-eight, the present year ninety-nine. A university lecture is also given once a week for fifteen weeks—this year on the early Hebrew traditions and institutions. Amherst college has a professorship devoted solely to Bible study, with Professor Burroughs as the incumbent. The two upper classes have Biblical literature as an elective, devoting to it four hours each week. It is probable that before long the study will be extended to the two lower classes. In Dartmouth college, says Mr. Cook, are "courses of Bible study, continuous and systematic, to which are given the first recitations of Monday mornings throughout the course." The system "dates perhaps from the foundation of the college, and probably has not been intermitted." The president adds "that during ten or twelve years he has not known a young man to graduate an avowed skeptic. He notes that the chief difficulties in the study is to find text books suited for college classes." Of other institutions having Bible study in the course as more or less systematized, we may name Boston university, Wesleyan university, Trinity college, Bowdoin college, and Smith and Wellesley colleges for women.

What can the churches do for the poor? This is the question that is constantly being reiterated with a continually increasing earnestness and directness. Dr. Rainsford asks it in the current number of the Forum, and his reply contains some very plain speaking. In the development of self-help, self-respect and self-dependence, in fighting, not with individuals, but with causes, in improving the tenement-house and competing with the saloon to gain the attention and interest of the vicious, lies, says Dr. Rainsford, the hope of Christian work in the crowded cities. He adds: "The rector of the wealthiest church in the world, in a letter to the New York Herald of November 30, 1889, over his own signature says: '[The] church was not founded with the direct view to moral culture, class elevation, etc. I have no confidence in the judgment or wisdom of those who tell us that the church must try to [illegible] the masses, purify politics, elevate the laboring classes.'

No wonder when [illegible] take such a position, that the masses turn from them with bitter impatience, and often turn, too, from the church in whose name they so mistakenly speak. When it is proposed to collect or expend money for a church edifice that shall embody American Christianity more fitly than any other, the collective wisdom of the church in New York proposes to [place] it—the new cathedral—where it will be practically inaccessible to the very poor. Surely it does not need any great penetration to see that two or three large free churches built on cleared spaces on east and west downtown sites always open to the public, provided with real preachers, and having each a large kindergarten, a swimming bath, and a gymnasium, as important parts of its outfit—that these, adequately supported and endowed, would be a recognition of our past and present ignorance and neglect and a step, nay, a stride, in the right direction. Near these churches a band of unmarried clergy and picked lay workers should live, undertaking duty for a stated time, perhaps, and under their control all these accessories of civilization could be placed. This plan would cost money, but it would do more to right the Church in the eyes of the working people, it would more immediately affect the life of the metropolis, it would do more to sweeten and purify the bitter springs at which the poor must drink, than the building of ten cathedrals would ever do."

The St. John's Parish Kalendar of Newark (P. E.) says: "In 1778 John Wesley reprinted a collection of prayers for every day in the week, and for each day he provided a prayer for the faithful departed. The prayer for Saturday evening runs thus:

"'Oh Lord, Thou God of Spirits, and of all flesh be mindful of Thy faithful, from Abel the Just even unto this day; and for Thy Son's sake give to them and us in Thy due time a happy resurrection and a glorious [rest] at Thy right hand for ever more.'"

Senses Go to Sleep in Definite Order

According to the best writers on the subject, it has been ascertained that in beginning to sleep the senses do not unitedly fall into a state of slumber, but drop off one after the other. The sight ceases first in consequence of the protection of the eyelids, to receive impressions first while all the other senses preserve their sensibility entire. The sense of taste is the next which loses its susceptibility to impressions, and then the sense of smelling.

The hearing is next in order, and last of all comes the sense of touch. Furthermore, the senses are thought to sleep with different degrees of profoundness. The sense of touch sleeps the most lightly and is the most easily awakened, the next easiest is the hearing, the next is the sight, and the taste and smelling awake the last.

Another remarkable circumstance deserves notice; certain muscles and parts of the body begin to sleep before others. Sleep commences at the extremities, beginning with the feet and legs, and creeping toward the center of nervous action. The necessity for keeping the feet warm and perfectly still as a preliminary of sleep is well known. From these explanations it will not appear surprising that, with one or more of the senses, and perhaps also one or more parts of the body, [imperfectly] asleep, there should be at the same time an imperfect kind of mental action, which produces the phenomenon of dreaming.—Chambers' Miscellany.

Senator Hearst's Men in Buckram

One day while the late Senator Hearst was a young man and yet had his fortune to make he and a few companions were on a prospecting tour. Along in the afternoon they sighted a band of Indians and, as in those days all Indians were hostile, Mr. Hearst and his friends naturally wanted to get away from there. All the prospectors, except the future senator, were mounted on horses. He was on a retired army mule, and soon found himself left in the rear. The Indians were on his trail and things began to look serious, when he called out to his rapidly disappearing companions:

"Hold up, boys; there's only a few of them. We needn't be afraid."

Just then the mule scented the approaching Indians, and with a wild snort started out at a gait that soon left the horsemen far behind. When Hearst was about a quarter of a mile in advance he turned in his saddle and yelled at the top of his voice:

"Hurry up, boys, you'll get scalped. There's more'n a hundred of them."—Chicago Post.

Wyoming's Woman Miner.

Mrs. Shane, a widow with two children, came to Wyoming two years ago and took up her residence in Jawbone gulch, Silver Crown mining district, where she took a claim and with her own hands has kept up the assessment work. The claim promises to be a paying one, and already she has uncovered a body of rich gold quartz, with indications of richer ore as depth is gained.

Mrs. Shane is a soldier's widow, and is a lady of fine education. Her cabin in Jawbone gulch bears evidence of refinement, and while it is in one of the most out of the way places in the camp she has any number of visitors, among whom will be found the best people of Silver Crown and the surrounding country.

To judge from appearances she is about thirty-five years old. She has brown hair, blue eyes and fair and intellectual face. For the past year she has been teaching the Silver Crown public school, by which means she has made her living while waiting for her mine to reach pay.—Cor. Denver Republican.

Doctors Are Safe

When the devil was sick his eagerness to become a monk is historical. A small New Yorker has been finding in the same way that altered conditions have a pronounced effect upon one's ambition. He is the son of a lawyer, and his admiration for his father has led him to announce frequently that when he became a man he intended to be in "just the same business as papa." He fell ill, however, and the services of the family physician were sought with prompt and fortuitous effect. Convalescence is apt to engender reflection and the small Robert became thoughtful the other afternoon, with this result: "I guess, mamma," he said, apropos of nothing, "I will not be in papa's business when I grow up. I would rather be a doctor, because, you see, he can't die."—Her Point of View in New York Times.

MANITOU SPRINGS.

Father Murphy of the Catholic church, who has been here attending the church dedication, returned yesterday to his old home in Chicago.

The Iron Spring pavilion is being repaired and repainted.

The Colorado Springs company have a force of men at work engaged in grading the streets in the Red Mountain addition.

Real estate is on the boom in Manitou. A small lot containing one twentieth of an acre was sold on Thursday for $501.

OUT WEST.

The Denver City Water company commenced suit against the Citizens' Water company on Wednesday to restrain the latter from furnishing the inhabitants of the town of Highlands with water, or to make good its to do so. A temporary writ of injunction has been granted.

The San Miguel Consolidated Mining company, of Colorado, have ordered a 200-horse power electric plant for driving their own stamp mill, crushing their gold ores and for lighting their mines.

Over 500 acres in Otero county are devoted to fruit culture.

A seed farm in Colorado, conducted on scientific and business principles would pay well. From it the gardener and farmer might be supplied with seeds peculiarly suited to this climate, and many dollars made by the customers of the Colorado seed farm as well as by the owner of it.—[Trinidad Chronicle.

SIGHT IS PRICELESS!

Dr. Louis H. Matthez,
CHICAGO, ILL.
(Formerly 125 State St.)
NOW AT THE ANTLERS.
Office: Room 66, Parlor Floor.
To Remain Here for a Short Time Only.

The following is from the Denver Rocky Mountain News of February 1st.

It is a rare occasion that calls a gentleman of Dr. Matthez' professional skill and ability from a large and lucrative practice in one of our principal cities to the interior. But not being content with the untold blessings he has conferred upon thousands in Chicago and elsewhere, Dr. Matthez desires to extend the benefits of his skill and knowledge of his profession to those who do not wish or those who are unable to incur the heavy expenses that would be entailed upon them when they find it necessary, at some period in their life to call in the assistance of scientific skill to enable them to recover their failing eyesight. Hence the doctor has been pleased to visit our city and during his contemplated stay here has been instrumental in doing much much good for defective eyes. We advise all to take advantage of this opportunity to have their eyes skilfully fitted. Failing sight can never retrieve itself unaided, and the longer it is neglected the more difficult it is to apply the remedy. Remember that Dr. Matthez is not a vender of glasses. He is a gentleman who has made a reputation second to none in this country as a skillful and scientific adjuster of glasses, having made the study of the eye a specialty, and after years of experience and close application to business is prepared to treat optically defective eyes in a practical and scientific manner. The doctor does not simply sell his glasses. They are merely adjuncts in his profession. He makes a thorough and careful examination of the eyes, in a manner peculiar to himself, and understands that delicate organ in all its various phases. Having satisfied himself thoroughly as to the conditions and needs of the eye under consideration, the doctor then proceeds to adapt the lenses to the requirements of the same. This is now the moment when the knowledge of the lenses required is brought to bear, as all depends upon the glasses to be selected.

Under ordinary circumstances there is a divided responsibility between the examiner of the eyes and the furnisher of the glasses. Dr. Matthez does all in one, using in conjunction with his science, skill, thoroughness in the examinations of the eyes, the finest workmanship in the glasses and frames science, art, and his own workmen can produce. During his stay in Denver he has demonstrated his ability.

COUNTY OF EL PASO. }
In the County Court.
Florence Ellen Saxenmeyer, Plaintiff vs. Ferdinand Saxenmeyer, Defendant—Summons.
The People of the State of Colorado.
To Ferdinand Saxenmeyer the Defendant above named—Greeting:
You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff, in the county court, of El Paso county, state of Colorado, and answer the complaint therein within twenty days after the service hereof if served within this county, or if served out of this county or by publication, within thirty days after the service hereof exclusive of the day of service, or judgment by default will be taken against you according to the prayer of the complaint. And if a copy of the complaint in the above entitled action be not served with this summons or if the service hereof be made out of this state, then ten days additional to the time hereinbefore specified for appearance and answer will be allowed before the taking of judgment by default as aforesaid.
The said action is brought to obtain a decree of divorce against defendant for the reason that defendant has willfully deserted and abandoned himself from plaintiff his wife, and has departed from the state of Colorado without any intention of returning as will more fully appear from the complaint in said action to which reference is here made.
And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and to answer the said complaint as above required the said plaintiff will take judgment by default and apply to the court for the relief demanded therein.
Given under my hand at Colorado Springs in said county this 23d day of December A. D. 1890.

JEAN PAUL MARAT'S LIFE

DR. RIDPATH'S ESTIMATE OF THE UNDERGROUND REVOLUTIONIST.

The Private and Public Life of The Friend of the People. A Cross Between Fatalist and Assassin. Subterranean Journalism—The Knife of Charlotte Corday.

[Copyrighted, 1891, by American Press Association.]

THERE are two Parises—one above ground, the other under. Without knowing this fact no one can understand a French revolution, much less the great revolution, which rose and broke a hundred years ago. Paris above ground has sunshine, boulevards, cafés, salons, men, women, nobility, enthusiasm. Paris underground has cellars, vaults, sewers, Plutonian haunts, darkness, saltpeter and death. But life is there with death—a kind of life—and the two sometimes conspire. Then comes fermentation, a sort of boiled fomding, and the underground sea spumes up through the bars, floods the streets and the whole world. Strange that the cellars of Paris should hold not only the soil but the seed germs of civilization!

In the broad country side of the nations the under man lives in a hut or cabin. A rat sits on the roof comb and sunlight peeps through the chinks. But in Paris the under man lives in a vault. This is true also in London and New York, and in all your great massed populations. The under man, the bottom man, the real earth man, lives in a cellar; his wife also, and his children. It is not a good place to live. The French Revolution began above ground, in the kingdom of thought, but the drippings of it fell into the Parisian cellars. Within a year from the beginning the very sewers were full of foam. With this subterranean effervescence all shapes and forms were cast to the surface. It was as if the sea had vomited! Unknown creatures came up from the pit of that horrid stomach and began to swim and shriek and fight. Among the rest there was spewed forth a doctor—Dr. Marat, Dr. Jean Paul Marat, or Mara, as his father spelled it—a sort of spectral pygmy, not five feet high, but bearing a monstrous head and hideous face. He was Dr. Marat; his enemies said a horse doctor. But that was a slander. True, he had been veterinary surgeon to the Comte d'Artois, destined after thirty-four years to be King Charles X of France. But Jean Paul was also a doctor of men, a good one, too, who had spent many years in London, where he wrote essays and books and learned to hate the British aristocracy. The Comte d'Artois made him physician of the guards, as well as of his horses—this in [illegible], for the hour was not yet come.

Marat had for his mother Louise Cabrol, [illegible] accounts for one part of him, but he had for his father Jean Paul Mara, of Cagliari, on the south-east coast of Sardinia, and this accounts for the other part. He was a cross between villain and Calvinist, a sort of hybrid of assassin and fatalist. He was born May 24, 1744, being five years older than Mirabeau and fourteen years older than Robespierre. In his youth he studied medicine for two years at Bordeaux, and presently became an oculist of no mean skill.

At this period of his life he absorbed his moral and philosophical opinions, which he carried with him, first to Paris, then into Holland and afterward to London. In his thirtieth year he began as an author, and in '74 published his first political treatise, under the significant name of "the Chains of Slavery." He remained in London twelve years longer, writing on medical and social questions, and was then recalled to France to prescribe for the guards (and stud also) of the Comte d'Artois, who gave him an annual salary of 2,000 livres for his services. A promising man already was Dr. Jean Paul.

But we must pass over much. After ten years the call was issued for the assembling of the states general. Now it was that Marat plunged into the swim and began to trouble the already troubled waters. With the opening of the states general many patriot Frenchmen were disposed to take the English constitution as the model for new France. But Marat had had enough of the British system, and in September of 1789 he published a powerful monograph entitled "A View of the Vices of the Constitution of England." Already the pygmy with the monstrous head had become a democrat and revolutionist according to the gospel of Rousseau.

With the beginning of the conflict proper behold Marat in Paris! He has become a journalist, the most audacious that has ever yet appeared among men. First he founded The Moniteur Patriote, then The Publiciste Parisien, and then on the 16th of September, 1789, The Ami du Peuple, or Friend of the People, a journal which from the day became the vent of the Faubourgs, the very mouth and soul of the canaille.

In this paper Marat began to pour out without measure the very [illegible] of radicalism and audacity. His attack was on everything—on the monarchy, on the king, the royal family, on the aristocracy, on feudal France, on everything that was above the earth. Whatever was in power was his lifelong policy to oppose. Now he was a man, now an institution, and now a principle at which he spat his venom. The Ami du Peuple became the mouthpiece of all discontent, vomiting floods of invective, acrid as vitriol, fierce as fire.

It was not long until the authorities pounced upon Marat and his dangerous journal, but he dived and fled to London. The pygmy with the monstrous head had now become an unquenchable volcano. Its fires had caught behind him; and he was soon able to return to Paris and resume his paper. Nevertheless he had to skulk and duck out of sight. He disappeared from the kingdom of daylight and became the god of the nether world. Subterranean Paris received him. Hades gave a swing gulp and he was safe. Dark, unexplorable vaults opened for his printing press and editorial stool. Ami du Peuple, from being the mouthpiece of the Faubourgs, became the mouthpiece of hell. Once and again the specter was routed from his hiding place, and in the close of 1791 he escaped to London. There he wrote his "École du Citoyen," or "School for the Citizen," a sanguinolent text book of insurrection and blood.

In four months, however, the Club of the Cordeliers called him back to Paris. The war with Austria flamed up on the horizon, and the revolutionary party in the capital needed every auxiliary—even the pen of Marat. The Ami du Peuple burst out more furiously than ever. It is probable that the atrocious scheme for the massacre of the loyalist prisoners was hatched in the brain of Marat, and that he inoculated the giant Danton with his malignant poison. At all events, the September massacre was the glory of Ami du Peuple and its editor. The five foot goblin rose in the bloody arena, and was chosen one of the representatives to the national convention from the commune of Paris.

But his work in that body by no means took him from his editorial stool. He had learned that his journal was the real weapon of power and though he presently changed the name to Journal of the French Republic he never relinquished his throne. Now came up, however, from the subterranean world—came up reeking; for he had lived in cellars, and starved and suffered and raved and cursed until horrid disease had seized him. His skin was covered with a sort of scrofulous eczema, which burned like fire. His cuticle ever afterward was a shirt of Nessus, which he must wear as one might wear a blister of sulphuric acid and fire.

Note well that Marat was never a coward. [illegible] policy [illegible] power in every form. He also coveted and prophesied and cavilled. He had in him something of the gifts of Cassandra and all of the malignity of Thersites. To quarrel was his breath and life. Strange that such a vindictive and malevolent soul should be truthful! But it was so. At the bottom Marat spoke the truth with his lips and from the heart. He believed absolutely the things which he said and published. He would join himself with nobody. He fought the king, and he fought the Girondists, and he fought Dumouriez, and he fought everything and everybody which seemed to him to be a part of the ancient order in France. Hard was the struggle between him and the Girondists. After the execution of the king that powerful party succeeded in arresting Marat, and he was brought before the revolutionary tribunal; but the trial ended in victory for the hateful specter, and he went on as before, only more furiously.

Marat, however, was not destined to go much farther in this world. The summer of 1793 found him in a desperate condition from his diseases. He was withered almost to a skeleton, and the burnings of his skin could only be appeased by sitting for the greater part of the time in a bath of hot water. But the energies of his ferocious mind continued to storm and scintillate. He had his lodgings in the Rue de l'École de Médecine, where in a sort of a garret, he had fixed his bath tub and editorial stool beside it, and where he was attended by a washerwoman. From this place he wrote his editorials and [illegible] prescriptions as while he sat in the bath, comparing tables in which he thought that by the killing of 270,000 additional victims the reign of liberty and equality might be established! Soothed by the hot water he would reach out his withered hand and add other names of the Girondists and their abettors to the list of death.

Thus was the bathing goblin occupied on the evening of the 13th of July, 1793. It was on the eve of the fourth anniversary of the storming of the Bastile. There is a tap at the door outside. The sweet voice of a woman is heard, evidently the voice of a maiden, who says that she would "do France a service." But Citizen Marat is sick and cannot see her. So he tells the washerwoman, and the message is delivered. But the girl persists, and is presently admitted to the spectacle. There is the monstrous head above the bathtub, the upper part of the shriveled yellow body, and the bony arms, like the arms of a skeleton. Charlotte Corday and Jean Paul Marat are face to face!

"Citizen Marat," says she, "I come from Caen and wish to speak with you." "Sit down, my child," says he; "what are the traitors doing down at Caen? And who are the deputies from your country?" Charlotte names Barbaroux, Petion and Louvet. The skeleton hand reaches out on the right side of the tub to his writing stool. He will note those names, and "their heads shall fall in a fortnight." By this movement his chest over the heart revolves out of the water. It is the hour of fate. One spring, and Charlotte is by his side. One plunge, and her knife is in his breast to the very hilt. It finds the malignant heart, and the black blood spurts into the water and over the tub. "A moi, chere amie!" "Ah me, my friend, help!" But horrid death chokes his voice, and as the washerwoman rushes in the dark soul of Marat rushes out forever.

David, the artist, shall soon paint the scene for posterity. The convention shall rush together, and all Paris subterranean Paris—shall howl and groan. A decree shall be passed by which the body, or dust, of Mirabeau, in the Pantheon shall make room for the ashes of this Marat. Funeral eulogies shall be spoken and poems written and dramas enacted to perpetuate the memory of the underground specter of the Revolution. But Jean Paul shall hear it no more. "Whither has he gone? Heaven knows, but not the earth."

As for Charlotte, the beautiful creature is haled to the tribunal. Witnesses are called. "They are not needed," [illegible]. "It is I that killed Marat. I killed one man to save a hundred thousand, a villain to save innocents, a savage wild beast to give repose to my country. I was a Republican before the Revolution, and I never wanted energy." She dresses herself beautifully for the scaffold. So modest is she in her simple girlhood that when the executioner removes the scarf from her neck she blushes [illegible]. Old [illegible], what an age was that a hundred years ago! How the story of it—of its men, its women and its events seems to us as a tale of fiction, the shadowy rollings together and unfoldings of a phantasmagoria, streaked with blood, bubbling like molten brass and kindled with flames of fire!

LEGAL BLANKS

WE desire to call special attention to our complete line of

Legal and Business Blanks,

Of which we have more than 600 forms. These blanks are made in conformity with the Code and General Laws of the State of Colorado, and we shall add from time to time as they are needed.

Our blanks are printed only on the old, reliable

Brown's Linen Ledger,

Which is guaranteed to combine both a perfect writing and erasive surface, and a fibre that will not permit it to break after having been folded. Legal and business blanks kept on file are subject to much handling, and first-class, tough paper is indispensable.

We invite comparison between our blanks and others, both as regards paper and printing. We are prepared to furnish these blanks in any quantity desired.

OUR CATALOGUE, containing a complete list of above, will be mailed free on application.

ARBOR DAY.

HOW THE GREAT TREE PLANTING DAY WAS CELEBRATED.

Appropriate Exercises to Celebrate Arbor Day—The High School, Garfield and Liller All Celebrate. Exercises at Colorado College, and Also at Colorado City.

Yesterday was Arbor day, appointed by the governor as a special occasion for the planting of trees. The day is fast becoming a popular holiday in Colorado, where the people fully understand the necessity for a greater vegetation. The schools have taken up the idea, and to them has usually fallen the duty of carrying out the exercises. That they do their work well was demonstrated by the very excellent programmes rendered yesterday.

AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

The High school held their Arbor day exercises in the old Congregational church building yesterday morning. There was a good programme for the occasion, and it was well carried out by the third year's English class, which graduates next year. This year's graduating class having carried out the programme for the exercises at the close of the winter term, it was thought best to give the honors of the arbor day celebration to the class below it.

Miss Bartlett, the teacher of English, explained to the few visitors present that it had been decided to make it, as far as possible, a Bryant day, and the following programme was rendered:

Music, Greeting .... Chorus of Boys
Essay—Bryant, the Poet of Nature .... Anna Ayer
Tree Burial .... Bryant
Addie Smith.
Music, Sigh, Gentle Gales .... Chorus of Girls
Individuality in Plant Life .... Jessie Dudley
Music, Song of Titania's Fairies .... Girls' Double Trio
[...] .... Dr[...]
Arbor Day Tree .... Ellen Baker
Coal a Product of Plant Life .... Florence Like
Music, Soldiers' Welcome .... School
Myths of Plant Life .... [...]
Music, Happy Land .... School
A Forest Hymn .... Bryant
Blanche Barber.
Music—Hail Columbia .... School

At the close of the programme Mayor-elect Sprague was called upon for a short address, and after apologies for the incompleteness of his remarks, the future mayor gave a short talk to his audience. He hoped that they would never be unprepared, as he was at that time, for any of the emergencies of life, and spoke of the lack of privileges in the days of his boyhood as compared with those of the school children of to-day. He mentioned the great importance of thoroughness, and remarked that "it's a different thing to go through a book than to have a book go through your head." He told of how in China the great rule of thoroughness is adhered to by the teachers of the young, and how each juvenile student of the Chinese alphabet has the several characters instilled into his memory by violent cuffs upon the ears. At the close, he thanked the scholars of the High school for their entertainment, and bestowed upon them the compliment of being a great honor to the city.

AT THE GARFIELD.

The exercises at the Garfield school were conducted in the open air in front of the building. The building was profusely decorated with the stars and stripes. The exercises began promptly at 9 o'clock and were held from a platform constructed upon the front steps. They consisted of recitations and songs by the pupils, concluded by an eloquent address by the principal of the school, Prof. J. M. Dickey. A great deal of hard work was put in preparing for the exercises, and they [...] greatly pleased.

At the Garfield annex a shorter programme was given, after which the pupils went over and participated in the celebration at the larger building.

AT THE LILLER.

The vote taken on Arbor Day for a state flower at the Liller school resulted in the choice of the columbine, (aquilegia) it receiving 263 votes out of the whole number [...]. The [...] second choice.

The following well-known Colorado flowers were subject to selection: Mariposa lily, evening star, yucca, [...], gilia, cactus, daisy, golden rod, alfalfa, evening primrose, clematis and aquilegia.

The new flag, recently purchased by pupils and patrons, generously [...] by Washington post, No. 9, P. O. S. of A., floated for the first time over the Liller building, but the formal flag raising will not occur until a later date.

AT COLORADO COLLEGE.

The Arbor day exercises at Colorado college were carried out in a very successful manner yesterday afternoon. The transplanting of the trees, maples, has been done intelligently and it is hoped they may live. This work was suspended, however, while a short literary programme was presented. The exercises were begun by the delivery of an oration by Harry De La Vergne. It contained many suggestive ideas and was replete with sparkling humor and pleasing allusions.

Miss Genevieve Sever followed with a metrical description of the work and its incidents.

Mr. A. W. Kettle was next introduced. He spoke extemporaneously of the future of the new west, paying a glowing tribute to its grandeur and great possibilities; the position that Colorado college would occupy; of the significance of the work of Arbor day, it was an opportunity to repay those who made possible such privileges as we now enjoy; prophesied the gratitude of posterity; realizing all this we were to return to those studies which lead to the eternal truth and right, with increased devotion and redoubled enthusiasm, with a sublimer conception of the function we were to discharge. Mr. Kettle speaks fluently and eloquently.

Mr. Worrall Wilson, the poet of the college, delighted the audience with some of his original versification, which contained many pleasing thoughts. This closed the literary programme.

M[...] Herbert McKenna and D. F. Matchett were awarded equal prizes of five dollars for the most work done.

Miss Currier triumphantly carried off a beautiful banner, a reward for work considered the best among the young ladies of the college.

ARBOR DAY AT COLORADO CITY.

The Bancroft school of Colorado City celebrated Arbor day with literary exercises and by planting trees.

The children were out early in the morning in anticipation of the day and flags and decorations were more profuse than on an ordinary Fourth of July.

At 10 a. m. the pupils formed in line under command of Superintendent Jackson and the corps of teachers and marched through the principal streets with flags and banners flying. George Wales and Walter Clark, of the Third and Fourth grades, were the drummers, and Frank Dunington was color bearer. While not equal to drilled soldiers, the children marched with better step than often observed in processions of older persons.

The following programme was then carried out from the front porch of the building:

Cornet Solo .... Prof. D. E. Rawley
Song .... "America."
Scripture Quotations .... Amanda Robb, H. Wales
Prayer .... Rev. Jon C. Harrington
Reading .... May Gibbs
"An Act to Establish Arbor Day."
Reading .... Adelber Ash
Proclamation of Governor.
Reading of Circular by State Supt. N. B. Coy .... Eddie Jewett
Song .... "Star Spangled Banner"
Recitation .... "Arbor Day." .... Maud Love
Recitation .... "April Day." .... Lillian Faulkner
Essay .... Arbor Day and Trees .... Maude Love
Concert Recitation .... Six Girls
"The Flower of Liberty."
Declamation .... "The Brook and Wee Elsie." .... Mable Hill
Declamation .... "The Choice." .... James Fousher
Song .... Primary Pupils
Recitation .... "The Fortune in the Daisy." .... Myrtle Love
Reading .... "Planting of the Apple Tree." .... Blanche Vannata
Arbor Day Acrostic .... Eight Girls
Recitation .... "Scatter Seeds in Springtime" .... Jeanette Byron
Song .... "Dedication"
Vote on Choice of State Flower .... Prof Rawley
Cornet Solo.
Planting and Dedicating Trees.
Class Song.

A large number of the citizens were in attendance. Prof. D. E. Rawley, recently from New York, added much to the exercises by his excellent music on the cornet. It is just the thing to accompany out door music. Professor Rawley is an experienced teacher and player.

Mrs. B. B. Watts, supervisor of music, had drilled the pupils on the national airs and led in the vocal music. She is highly cultured in music and a very successful teacher.

Five trees were planted, one cottonwood, two elms and two box elders, and were dedicated with appropriate speeches to County Superintendent Bettey, Gen. Wm. T. Sherman, George Bancroft, H. W. Longfellow and Zebulon Pike.

The vote on a state flower created considerable interest. The following is the result of the vote; 334 votes were cast; Columbine 132; mountain daisy 20; lily 90; [...] 12; [...] 3, rose 56; primrose 2; cactus, sunflower and violet 1 each.

[...] Services.

Services at the First Congregational church, corner of Tejon and St. Vrain at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. to-morrow. The pastor, Rev. Jas. B. Gregg, will preach in the morning. In the evening the service will be of an unusual and interesting character. Since the beginning of the year the Sunday school has raised about $125 for benevolent purposes. It has been decided to appropriate this money to various benevolent ends in sums of $25 each. Twenty-five dollars will be given toward the South End Kindergarten work and Mrs. M. J. S. Otis, to whose [...] labors the inception and success of that work is so largely due, will give some account of it. Twenty-five dollars has been given to the Boys' Club movement carried on with such happy results in many [...] cities, an account of which will be given by Mr. F. W. Isham. Another twenty-five dollars has been given for the purpose of printing the gospels in the Indian sign language, some account of which will be given with illustrations by one of the teachers of the Deaf Mute Institute. Mr. Jencks, formerly a missionary in Japan, will appear in Japanese costume and give some account of the customs of the country and the nature of the missionary work. Addresses will be made also by Superintendent Sanders and the pastor. The occasion will be one of marked interest.

Bluebeard, Jr.

The Denver Times says of the glittering operatic spectacle which will be seen here at the opera house next Monday night:

"Bluebeard, Jr., the famous Chicago opera house spectacle and extravaganza, was presented for the first time in Denver at the Tabor last night.

"There is some amusing burlesque in 'Bluebeard.' There is some very pretty music, tastefully culled from the operas. But these are merely the accompaniments, the interludes introduced to hold the attention of the audience while the scene shifters are arranging the succeeding stage picture.

"There is a host of pretty girls with 'Bluebeard,' too. They add the charm of beauty in motion to the splendor of the scenery and the magnificence of the stage settings.

"Then there is Mlle. Paris, the ballet dancer. Mlle. Paris does not speak, but she has most eloquent legs. She made her first a[ppearance] with a graceful rhetorical flourish of skirts and limbs and then whirled gracefully away in a series of rhythmic motion of legs and arms. Then there were declamatory springs, antithetic caperings and graceful pirouettes that would have have made Terpsichore herself green with envy.

"Mlle. Paris is a charming ballet dancer but she was not so popular with the audience as the other dancers, because she was simply a ballet dancer of the classical school, and most people have seen the classical ballet before. What the public wants in burlesque is novelty."

Mrs. S. Threlkeld has begun suit in the county court for divorce from Augustus T. Threlkeld, alleging cruelty and desertion.
